// Abstract

Assadaf and Tujaib Phratries are the decedents of Kinda, the Arabic genuine tribe. Firstly, they inhabited Hadramout valley then in different places in the Islamic State especially Egypt then Morocco.

Assadaf and Tujeib Phratries embraced Islam between the years 9-10 A.H. when their missions came to the Prophet (ABAPUH) in Medina and declared their Islam. They were pagan and some of them were Christians and Jewish. With other Arab tribes, they had the honor of liberating the lands of Egypt and Morocco by enlisting their members as soldiers and leaders in the formation of Arab Islamic Armies liberating those areas. Their participation played a great role in leading battles and victory.

The two phratries also had a great role in scientific and intellectual movement in the Islamic world especially in Egypt and Morocco by the participation of their distinguished figures in various fields of inquiry especially mental and transactional sciences. Also they played a distinguished role in administrative fields and positions in the Arabic Islamic State.
